X-Force Key Generator for Autodesk Revit - Best answers to your.Q: How to call an operation from a button click event in a ListView How can I call a method from a click event of a button in the ListView? I have the code like below: public partial class ListViewItem : UserControl { public ListViewItem() { InitializeComponent(); lv_Elements.Adapter = new CustomListViewAdapter(PageUtils.GetApplicationContext(), this.savedElements); lv_Elements.ItemsSource = savedElements; } void Button1_Click(object sender, RoutedEventArgs e) { // Some logic } } What I want to do is, when I click the button a method should be called and some logic should be executed. A: First off, you won't be able to have the ListView instance directly refer to your button, since the ListView is a read-only view and cannot be modified. It looks like you would instead want to assign the click event handler to the ListView's SelectedItem which can be modified:
