The Creation of These Games

The games The Elder Scrolls Online and Neverwinter Nights were developed by triCk and Bigpoint, respectively.

We have worked hard to create our next MMO title, The Elder Scrolls Online, based on feedback we have received from fans of The Elder Scrolls games and people who enjoy MOBA games. This means that many aspects of the title are directly informed by our experience working on the most successful titles in this genre, The Elder Scrolls Online: Tamriel Unlimited and The Elder Scrolls Online: Knights of the Nine.

We've taken all of your feedback from Elder Scrolls Online's launch and the months since. While no feature has been changed directly based on user feedback, we wanted to share some updates and insight into the future of The Elder Scrolls Online. Previous iterations of our feedback messages had a significant effect on the game's development.

To keep our players a step ahead of the game and future updates, we have begun direct contact with ESO subscribers. This means that we are going to be visiting you through the channels you use to communicate with us directly. While we have a team of people monitoring the discussion, we have recruited a new group of moderators to help us navigate the sometimes-disturbing posts we receive in a useful and unbiased manner. With the upcoming 1.0.0.6 Update we have worked to soften the blow of a few of the uglier new mechanics with some bug fixes and buffs to the oldest features of the game
