Justin Bieber sat in the audience and later performed with The Weeknd, but something happened during his performance. It was a big dick kicking his own ass out of the venue. The bassist apparently headbutted Bieber before he threw down and kicked him out. The crowd approved after that. The video didn't appear to be from The Weeknd's set, but I guess it could have happened during the man's set. It's a good thing that the bassist is OK. He was probably horrified. Bieber is a great dude, but he's not as big of a people's person as he thinks he is. You could just tell it was an accident, but it could have been much worse if he wasn't kicked out on time. For one fun night only, there is a chance that UConn women's basketball's 2017-2018 season might not be the last of the Dean-Sampson era. The New York Times' Charles O'Connor is reporting that UConn and its attorneys have an offer on the table that would allow the Huskies to stay at the school and use Bob Diaco as the head coach for the coming season while simultaneously being paid a $1.25 million buyout to leave. Diaco has been told that a buyout of that kind is possible, and no decision has yet been made. UConn has not decided whether it will accept the offer, according to people familiar with the matter. If the offer is accepted, the school would give Diaco a modified five-year deal that runs through 2020-21, according to one person with direct knowledge of the negotiations. O'Connor says that when asked about the possibility, Diaco told him that UConn's athletic director and athletic brass are communicating with him so that he can make the right decision. UConn went to the Final Four last season, losing to top-ranked Baylor in the Elite Eight. Levels of soluble brain-derived neurotrophic factor (sBDNF) in peripheral c6a93da74d
